

Nathanael Dewhurst combines the rare talents of an artist with a techie. He has an uncanny ability to understand and communicate what and why a non-techie does not understand. He is the first "computer guy" who listened to questions and then had me work through a solution with him, enabling me to participate in the thought process behind the solution. He is a born teacher.

Past computer support people have routinely sat down at my computer and typed away, leaving me in the dark as to how or why they were doing the thing they do. Not so with Nathanael. He took the time and thought to engage me and my ignorance and turned it into a learning experience. He taught me how to think about what needed to be done in a manner that has allowed me to grow my computer experience.

Different than most techies, he also has a facile command of the English language and can translate thoughts into fluid prose. He designed a website from my notes and honed the language and presentation to masterful levels. He could have been an ad man, but I'm grateful to have found this thoughtful, artistic techie.
